

Dates: June 2 - 21, 2019

Program Fee: $4,900

*3 credits of tuition not included.

Learn more on
Tuesday, September 11,
12:30—1:15 p.m. in Luter 142.

Priority application deadline for this course is
Thursday, September 20 by 4:00 p.m.

Sport Leadership in Nordic Culture

While sport is 'universal' and has been tagged as the one thing that unites the world, its meaning and role as a cultural institution varies globally. In the United States we have a unique way of organizing sport that is radically different from the rest of the world; the structure and culture of American sport result in assumptions about sport leadership.

Explore sport as a global cultural institution, consider the effect of cultural context on different levels and types of leadership within various levels and types of sport. Examine American assumptions through learning about and experiencing how sport's history, significance, function, and leadership operate in Nordic cultures. Students will consider their own and others' ways of leading in sport through the lens of different cultural systems, which will help them clarify the relationships among culture, values, sport, and leadership, and help them understand more fully leadership in sport and leadership in general.

